Microsoft Xbox 360 Emulator About.Q: Is there a way to track an external script that runs on the server? Is there a way to track the script that is currently executing on the web server? So, that when we update the script, we can log the script update into a database, or even email an administrator about it? I guess it's not a big problem, and I'll have to write one myself, but thought I'd ask first... A: You would need to implement a watchdog. But maybe that's not really what you want to do. A watchdog is a piece of code that controls access to a website. It is started automatically when access is denied or the server is overloaded. This monitors a condition like the maximum number of simultaneous connections, the average load or the number of concurrent users. If the monitored condition is met, the watchdog disables access. There are various watchdog tools available. One of them is htaccess, which is responsible for keeping the access to a website to a certain level. The other tools provide extra functionality. The nginx module ngx_http_h2x requires access to a certain server response. This answer was inspired by the following answer on Serverfault. Q: What is "Lazy"
